Grant in Naples.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27th.—A London special says: A correspondent at Naples sends a full report of Grant's reception in that city, and his movements during his stay there. The General and party arrived at Naples on board the U. S. steamer Vandalia early on the evening of the 17th inst. On the following day, in company with Mrs. Grant and son, he made the ascent of Vesuvius, but the day being cold the party did not reach the crater. They lunched at the House of Refuge, near the Observatory, and spent a pleasant hour enjoying a remarkably fine view of Capria and Ischia. The plains studded with villages and lined with snow-clad hills, and the snow looked beautifully clear and white in the gorgeous sunlight of an Italian sky. They returned in the evening to the Vandalia, after a really pleasant day. Wednesday the General and family visited the ruins of Pompeii. The Government had made arrangements for a special excavation in honor of the General, that he might see how the work was done, and see some of the curiosities recovered just as they were placed when the city was so suddenly ruined. The day was a little cold, but clear and in every way favorable for work. The directors of the excavation received Grant's party, and conducted them to the principal points of interest. Two hours were spent in wandering among the ruins of the ancient and memorable city, and at every step something of interest was seen. The workmen then proceeded to dig out a chamber of a buried house and discovered some fragments of a table made of wood and bronze. The workmanship was very curious and elaborate, and was examined with great interest by the whole party. The next object of interest discovered was a loaf of bread, wrapped neatly in a cloth, and perfectly distinguishable. Many other curious and interesting articles were found, and inspected by the party of visitors, and all expressed themselves highly pleased with their visit to the ruins. They returned in the evening. Thursday Grant returned the official visits of the civil and military authorities of the city. As he left the Vandalia the yards were manned and a salute fired, the salute being returned by the Italian Admiral. Grant then landed, and was met by the General commanding the district, who had a regiment of Bersaglieri drawn up in front of the royal palace, which was reviewed by Grant and the Italian officials. He then visited the naval and military schools and the palace, after which he attended a reception at the house of Consul Duncan. During these visits Grant was accompanied by his son, Commander Robeson, Lieutenants Rush and Miller, and a splendid retinue of Italian officials. The whole tone of the reception accorded him was cordial and stately. The General expressed himself with the greatest admiration of Italian troops.

Girard College has been enlarged, so as to accommodate 900 students, and is now open to non-residents of Pennsylvania. Harvard's requirements for admission of only three languages is criticised by Boston newspapers as too low a standard. Yale has just received from Frederick W. Stevens, of this city a gift of New Haven property. Phillips Academy at Andover, Mass., will have a poem read by Oliver Wendell Holmes, on the near occasion of its centennial anniversary. Several Ohio colleges announce special lectures on practical agriculture for farmers. The School of Oratory in Brown University has had readings of Shakespearean plays, Dartmouth has dropped several freshmen for incompetence. Cornell has a Students' Guild for the aid of the sick. Every Trinity senior is required to write a poem of a hundred lines.

One of the half dozen books in the English language which have brought the most grist to the publisher's mill is Burn's "Justice of the Peace." The author was a country curate, who, when he had completed his laborious work, came up to London to find a publisher. The first to whom he went offered $100, and the poor author, utterly disheartened away, a few days later he went to Miller, an eminent publisher in the last century; Miller consulted a young lawyer who generally advised him on law books, and was told that the book would be cheap at $1,000. Burns cheerfully accepted the offer. Miller made $55,000 out of the book, but had the decency to send Burns $500 on each new edition making its appearance.

RENO, WASHOE COUNTY, NEVADA
SATURDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1877

Shall We Retreat.

We publish the following extract from the Eureka Republican, as a clear expression of the Hayes-Conkling issue:

Senator Conkling turns from the advanced position gained by his party and seeks to inscribe on the same way-side post of the past "patronage is the basis of party organization." The principle is that of Jackson but is differently expressed. In attacking it, our President is contending against a powerful system and opposing himself to a force which has not been adequately measured by the masses of his party followers. Nevertheless the principles contended for by him are those laid down in the fundamental law of our Government; and however long and disastrous the conflict, the result will be that, sooner or later, even though the Republican party be overthrown and compelled to form anew its columns and readvance to the position, the people will yet recognize the propriety of the reform sought to be established and will then insist on the maintenance of the position now sought to be held by President Hayes. The two great powers of Chief Executive are those of the veto and of nominations to office. One might as well be attacked as the other. Without them, we have no executive. Those who stand by the President in this issue are fighting under the reform banner of the Republican party. Those who are opposing him in it, are seeking to counter-march our columns and to make a retrograde movement. Such a movement would more surely overthrow us than any attack our enemies can make against us; for then, should we cease to be the party of progress, the living embodiment of the spirit of the age and then would thinking acting and intelligent men leave our ranks.

It is asserted in Washington that Hayes will send back to the Senate nominations which have been rejected. This is highly improbable, but it is likely that he will submit nominations which have an entirely similar meaning for Conkling and his faction of non-presidential sore-heads. In this way the President will win the battle which so many politicians consider as ended. The appointing power of the President can hardly be usurped upon the pretext of precedent.

Beecher is again in the legal frying-pan. He bargained ten years ago to write a "Life of Christ," in eighteen months, and the same is not yet finished. He drew on his contract over $10,000, and his publishers, having been at enormous expense, were sold out the other day, right, title and interest. Beecher will now be sued for the loss sustained and damages.

The Wiggington-Pacheco contest still continues in the House and the sub-committee on Elections have reported in favor of Wiggington, giving him a majority of three. That case was pretty well tried in California and Wiggington was defeated at every turn.

MacMahon has submitted, and now the time is divided between prosecution for intended coup d'etat and prosecutions for insults to the President. One party wants the non-submissive punished, and MacMahon wants others investigated who made him submit.

The percentage of gold in the Grand Prize ore is steadily increasing with the depth, and should the rate continue at a further depth of two hundred feet, the ore would be equal to the Bonanza in gold, or 47 per cent.

Nathan Coombs, owner of Ashland, Billy Cheatham and Lodi and father-in-law of Jno. M. Coghlan, died in Napa recently. Coombs came to California in '43 and was a Republican politician of some note.

Mayhem and Robbery.

Two Chinamen are Fearfully Maltreated and Robbed Near Franktown by Demons of the Highway.

[Carson Appeal, 28th.]

A gentleman who came in from Washoe Valley yesterday reports a case of inhuman treatment and robbery of a couple of Chinamen near Franktown, on Wednesday night. The victims are engaged in gardening upon a plot of rented ground, and built upon the same the huts necessary for their occupation and habitation. They possessed the usual characteristics of the race; being industrious and frugal, and as they had been located upon the garden plot for several years it is but natural to suppose that they had accumulated considerable money. At about dusk on the evening above named, two disguised horsemen rode up to the abode of these hardy sons of toil, dismounted and entered the place. The Chinamen were occupied in preparing their evening repast when the desperadoes entered, and without ceremony tied their hands and feet, and bound their queues together. After which the robbers ordered the Chinamen to disclose where their money was secreted. The Celestials remained obdurate, exhibiting a decided and unmistakable reluctance to shelling out their hoarded wealth. This so exasperated one of the robbers that he cut off the right ear of each of his victims with a Bowie-knife, and severed the queues from their respective craniums. The unfortunate fellows were writhing in pain and agony, but yet would not reveal to their torturers where their money was hidden. The fiends then proceeded to buck and gag their defenseless victims, after which they commenced a careful and systematic survey of every nook and creek about the premises. While engaged in this occupation they were startled by footsteps, and immediately thereafter a third Chinamen came into the hut to see his friends, and was horror-stricken to see the plight in which they were. He made a move to retrace his steps, but the ruffians were too many for him. In the twinkling of an eye he was pounced upon, bucked and gagged, but not otherwise injured. The search was then continued, and after the lapse of half an hour the enterprise of the scoundrels was substantially rewarded by finding a sack containing $1,200 in gold and silver, sewed up in a mattress lying on one of the bunks. The money the robbers appropriated to themselves, remounted their horses and rode off to where—no one knows. Nothing has been seen or heard of the villains since. The poor, mutilated and derelict Chinamen were compelled to pass the night in pain and misery, having been left gagged and bucked. At an early hour on Thursday morning they were discovered by a friend who called on business, and thus were relieved from their unpleasant situation. The victims can give no further description of the robbers than that they were masked so that no features of their faces could be distinguished.

SOAP FACTORY.—This morning we visited Kane's soap factory at the Alhambra Hall, near the iron bridge. While the building is not imposing in its appearance we found the work of soap making going forward, and the saponaceous article lying in profusion about us. The process is quite a simple one. The various ingredients tallow, lye, resin, ammonia, alcohol etc., are heated in iron kettles, thoroughly mixed, and poured into large boxes. When the mixture has sufficiently cooled, the sides and ends of the boxes are removed, and the soap cut into symmetric bars by means of wire; they are then removed to a table, stamped, and when hardened sufficient for packing, are wrapped in paper and boxed. They are now ready for the market. The present capacity of the factory is 60 boxes of 20 bars each per day, but Mr. Kane says that in two days he can increase the capacity to 100 and even more boxes per day. As to the quality of this soap we cannot as yet speak. Judging from its composition and from the best of references we would say that it is a superior article to Colgate and other common soaps sold in the market. The manufacturer claims that he has the cheapest soap for the price now sold, and asks the people to give it a thorough test according to the printed directions. In the Spring he will be ready to make toilet and other soaps. All that he now asks is that our citizens give his soap a trial. What our town and county needs is manufactures. We now suffer from too many "middle men." Shall we encourage home production?

IRRIGATION.—D. W. Bryant informs us that the Orr Extension Ditch Company have been steadily at work and the ditch is now completed as far as the ranch of Robert Frazier, in Truckee Meadows. The work will now be taken up by Henry Orr, and it is expected that by April 1st, 1878, the enterprise will be completed as far as section 21, in Spanish Spring Valley. Another extension company is talked of, to lead from that point further up the valley. The ditch will carry 1,000 inches of water and more alfalfa ranches will be the result.

Messrs. Bragg and Borland were engaged to-day in decorating Smith's Academy of Music for the grand ball New Year's Eve. We understand that Mr. Chamberlain is busy also making preparation for a grand supper for the festive dancers. Swallowtail coats are in demand and the dressmakers are busily engaged on ball dresses. Thus it will be seen that the Riverside-Club and its friends anticipate a glorious dance next Monday night.

OFFICERS.—At a meeting of Amity Lodge, K. of P., Friday night, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: J. M. Flanagan, Chancellor; Commander; F. A. Teasland, Vice Chancellor; Isaac Chamberlain, Prelate; Pierce Evans, Keeper of Records and Seal; W. D. Phillips, Master of Finance; J. J. Becker, Master of Exchequer; Trustee, long term, Isaac Chamberlain.

Our stock report will appear next week.

Origin of Man.

A small audience greeted Prof. Gunning last evening at the Methodist Church. We had presumed from the character of the subject, and the known ability of the speaker, that every seat would have been filled. But this is not to our purpose. The lecture began by tracing the upward growth of the brain in vertebrate animals, tracing the evolution of the brain life through the fish, reptile, bird and mammal up to man, also delicately touching on the more rapid evolution of the human specie in the embryonic state. The points of similarity of structure; the gradual unfoldings of the higher types; the comparative history of the brain evolution of the vertebrate were clearly and scientifically described. Looking for the connection of man to a lower type the speaker, without so asserting, took the position held by Prof's. Morse and Huxley, and we might say of almost every modern biologist. The chimpanzee, gorilla, south Australian, south African and Caucasian were compared in their physical structure and the indisputable points of resemblance concisely outlined. Many naturalists had endeavored to find in man a physical organization entirely different from all other forms of animal life. For man speech was claimed as the badge of destination, yet Prof. Whitney, the distinguished American linguist, had dispelled this assumption by showing that the chatter, quirk and click of the anthropoid apes, gorillas, etc., were not sufficiently different from many of the lowest races to maintain a radically scientific mark or badge of distinction in favor of man. Then it was said that man alone could reason. This the Prof. demonstrated from Prof. Bartlett's and the experiments of many others, was less a distinctive mark of dissimilarity than speech. Turning to the body structure he yet more clearly showed that in nerves, muscle, bone and every part, that the gorilla and man are quite similar. The ear, hand and foot of man had been claimed by several naturalists as Owen, Linnaeus and others to mark a distinction in favor of man, but Huxley and others had proved that this difference could not be maintained. Again the defenders of the theory that man is dissimilar to the rest of the animal world claimed that a particular process in the brain of man called the hippocampus minor is found alone in man. Huxley found this same part in the chimpanzee. Then a muscle used alone in climbing was claimed to belong solely to the gorilla, but anatomists had found this same muscle in the leg of man. It is a physiological law that a part little used or not used at all becomes debilitated; hence it occurs that in many portions of the body are parts which the scientist finds prominently developed in other animals which in man is scarcely developed at all, or are found only by diligent search. One may also say that every part of man's structure has a history. The old Greek, however, had a word which does show that in man we do find a badge of distinction. Man is of the "anthropos"—the upturned eye. He has the quality of mercy, understands duty and justice and possesses the soul faculties. His mind marks the higher impress of the hand of the beneficent Creator.

ANNUAL MEETINGS.—The North Truckee Ditch Co. will hold its annual meeting January 12th, 1878.

The North Drain Ditch Co. will hold its annual meeting on January 17th, 1878.

ASSESSMENT.—An assessment of twenty-five cents per share has been levied by the South Overman Consolidated Mining Company, delinquent on the 28th of January next.

Mr. D. E. McDarty, of the Virginia Chronicle was in town this morning. The publisher and editor of this spicy sheet is a man of erudition and as congenial as he is intelligent.

Go and hear the lecture on "History of Gold and Silver Formation" at the Methodist Church to-night. It will be the last lecture of Prof. Gunning in Nevada.

The bonanza mines will make a 300 bar shipment this evening or next Monday night. How is that for a holiday shipment?

Monday will be "steamer day." There will be more calls than on New Year's, but they will not be half so pleasant.

A Card.

Mr. Editor: A few days ago I wrote a playful review of the report of the State Mineralogist. The Enterprise, in a few words of introduction, said that the vanity of the compiler had fastened on the State an imperishable reproach. The author of these reports, stung by the words of the editor, has seen fit to wreak his vengeance on me. He has published a long letter. I seek no controversy and will have none, but I wish to say a word or two on those issues raised in this letter. Knowledge has come to me the State Mineralogist was circulating a story in connection with the name of Mr. Tobriner. I addressed a note to Mr. Lohrner, of which this is a copy:

MR. TOBRINER,
MY DEAR SIR:

This evening closes my labors in Carson, and you will confer a favor on me by stating to the audience, in my presence, what took place in your store while I was looking at your cabinet. I will esteem it a favor.

Yours truly,
W. D. GUNNING.

This gentleman did not comply with a request so reasonable, but now, after I have gone under the manipulation of the mineralogist, he gives this man a card, which, in its form and color, I brand as false. Again the mineralogist says he is authorized by the Hon. Mr. Mighels to say publicly that the reports of my lectures were written by myself. This charge is intended to affect my honor, as the other my honesty. Through Mr. Helm, the County Auditor, I sent to the Appeal a card of which the following is a transcript as nearly as I can remember:

A Card.

Will anyone who has read the Appeal turn to the files and say whether the few brief reports of my lectures were not the baldest statement of a few of the points, without a word of comment? Will Mr. Mighels say whether he did or did not call at my room and importune me to write an abstract of the lectures? Will Mr. Robinson, his associate, say whether he did, or did not, ask me again and again to write for him, an abstract of the lecture? Will these men say whether, in the few abstracts I wrote, I did not give them to understand that I was doing an "uncongenial thing merely to favor them?" Mr. Whitehill is a fellow citizen; I am a stranger, but I will rest any question between us on a single word from either of these men, his friends and neighbors.

W. D. GUNNING.

The "Appeal" did not publish. To-day closes my work in Nevada, and I am sorry to leave any bitterness behind me; I am sorry to raise an issue of veracity with the compiler of the reports, but when this gentleman says I wrote the review because he did not act as my lecture agent, he knows that neither I, nor any one in my behalf, ever hinted such a thing to him. When he says that I asserted that seven-tenths of all the ore ever taken from the Comstock lode, came from a depth of less than 600 feet he knows that I was speaking of the status of the lode while King was writing his report, he knows this because I referred him to the page on which King made the statement. When he says that he discovered my lectures and writings to be weak and prosy, he says what it was altogether proper for him to say. You are altogether right O Custodian of the Stones of State!—In bad logic and bad rhetoric, too much rhetorical "exploitation" as it were, metaphors too "exceeding multifarious" in their diversity "as it were also," adjectives "beneficent" the wrong nouns "as it were thereby also."

W. D. GUNNING.

THE CREAL FURNACE.—The furnace was thought to have reached proper heat last night, and some very refractory ore was tried without results. It was found that the drying out process was not completed. This afternoon a higher degree of heat was attained, and some Belleville ore will be tried. Messrs. Alt, Bishop & Co. will prosecute their experiments at all events, and intend to learn for themselves the character of Pyramid ore.

Newspaper men, as all other men do, sometimes feel blue, but how pleasant it is to have an intelligent lady say to you, as one said to us last evening: "I have looked for your paper sixteen times to-night with a lantern, and then was obliged to go to my neighbor's to get a copy to read." That lady appreciates our efforts, and thus again are we encouraged in our good work.

TO PEAVINE.—Prof W. D. Gunning has visited the Emma mine, near Reno, and to-day took the road for Peavine, where he will inspect the mines of that locality. Professor Gunning is an industrious scientist, and his report of Peavine will be interesting. To-night the Professor leaves us, after his lecture hour, for Sacramento.

Legs.—When a man walks he does not stand on both legs at once. He uses them alternately, resting his weight first on one and then on the other. Just so commerce uses gold and silver.—Graphic.

That is a very pretty illustration, but unfortunately the analogy is hopelessly wrecked when the fact is recalled that silver always has constituted a very small fraction of the coinage of the United States. What kind of walking could a man do if one leg was three feet long and the other leg only about six inches?—Graphic.

As a matter of fact, the United States mints have issued ten times as many silver coins as gold coins, while the value of silver has always surpassed that of gold that was actually in circulation as currency. As to the ambulatory metaphor, if a man had two legs, either of which were liable to become a little shorter than the other, but neither of which ever did become more than four per cent. shorter than the other while both were in use, we should not expect him to saw either of them unless he was born an idiot.—Graphic.
